

Do you provide care for someone?

You may be a parent, a wife, husband or partner, a son or daughter, a sister or brother, or friend to someone who needs support as a result of their illness (physical or mental illness and substance misuse), condition or disability.

If you provide them with help and support to manage their life – you are also a carer.

What to expect when... You make an adult carer support plan.

What is an adult carer support plan?

An adult carer support plan (ACSP) starts with a conversation where you discuss your caring role and what is important to you in your life. It helps plan what could help you work towards your goals.

Why is an adult carer support plan important?

An adult carer support plan helps you to think about what support you might need if you wish to continue caring and what could help you to have a life alongside caring. The plan sets out any needs you have and how they will be met.

Making a plan also helps to decide which level you reach in the local eligibility criteria for support. This will be used to decide what support you have a right to.

No matter what level you are, every carer can access information and support from community organisations like your local Carer Centre and you may also be able to access other forms of support too.

The Carers Act.

As of April 2018, the Act means all adult carers have the right to an adult carer support plan. For young carers this is called a young carer statement.

Local authorities also have new duties to support carers which include:

- A power to support carers and a duty to support carers who have needs that meet the local eligibility criteria.
- A duty to provide an information and advice service to carers.
- A duty to publish a Short Breaks Services Statement.

Local Health Boards also have a duty to involve carers in discharge from hospital and a duty to prepare a local carer strategy with the relevant authority.

How do you make an adult carer support plan?

Before you have a conversation with your worker it can help to think of a typical day helping the person you care for and make a note of your needs and concerns. If the caring situation changes a lot over time, think about what a good and bad day look like. Also think about the things that could help you cope with caring.

Your worker might talk about outcomes with you. Outcomes are a way of describing what is important to you and what your aims and hopes are. Some examples of outcomes are:

- Being as well as you can be.
- Feeling valued.
- Feeling informed.
- Having a life outside of caring.
- Being listened to.

The key points of the conversation are written down with agreed actions and this becomes the adult carer support plan. You will have a copy to keep. If you wish, a copy can also be given to any other person you choose.

How can I find out more about having an adult carer support plan?

Think about what support you may need to help you in your caring role. Perhaps you only want advice or help on a couple of small points instead of a full adult carer support plan assessment.

You're still entitled to ask for and to receive a full assessment and Adult Carer Support Plan if you want one, and, it is free.

Either way, we are here to help. Please ask your social worker, if you have one, or contact the Fife Carers Centre using the contact details on the right.

More support is available for you as a carer. For more information about our other 'What to expect when...' leaflets or visit our carers web-site www.fifehealthandsocialcare.org/carers/.
